MRS. BRADLEY'S FINAL ORDEAL

Woman Again Takes Stand to Continue Tragic Story of Her Life — Senator Brown's Letters in Evidence.

As Mrs. Bradley told of former Senator Brown's treatment of her, she broke down and wept. Jurors, court officers and spectators bowed their heads in sympathy, and many were also in tears. There was a dramatic pause of several minutes in the recital, during which the silence of the court room was broken only by the woman's sobs.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—With downcast eyes and steps that faltered, Mrs. Annie Bradley rose from her seat in the crowded courtroom to-day and resumed her place on the witness stand, continuing the harrowing recital of her life with Senator Arthur Brown and his final contemptuous refusal to marry her that caused her, in a moment of blind, unreasoning rage, to shoot him down.

Every seat in the stuffy justice chamber was filled, and outside hundreds clamored vainly for admission. As Mrs. Bradley, in broken whispers, so low that the court stenographer barely heard her, answered the kindly questions of her counsel, Judge Powers, tears filled the eyes of every spectator and the jury were visibly affected.

SWEARS HIS LOVE IN LETTERS.

Letters breathing deep devotion, poetically phrased with expressions of undying love, were placed before Mrs. Bradley for identification. They were written by Brown and spoke of his determination to wed the frail defendant and give his sons a name.

The letters, addressed variously and whimsically "Polly Madison, care of Mrs. A. M. Bradley," or "Mrs. A. M. Bradley or "Mrs. Julia Mundell," and been sent to Salt Lake City, to Ogden, to Grand Junction, to Los Angeles, wherever the for fortune of the wandering paid led them.

Brown wrote many missives. Five hundred of them are in possession of attorneys. One hundred of these, it is expected, will be read to the jury.

CROWDS THRONG COURTROOM.

As early as 6 o'clock to-day there began to arrive a shivering, breakfastless crowd of, curiosity-made-women, whose chief aim in life seemed to be to secure seats in the courtroom to hear the closing chapters of Mrs. Bradley's story.

In the space set aside for the public, and thrown open a half hour before the court convened at 10 o'clock, there was not a score of men. The women, packed closely together and chattering like magpies, were cautioned by officers to keep silence. Justice Stafford, cautioned women spectators for their unseemingly curiosity and threatened those who rose in their seats with ejectment.

Mrs. Bradley looked weary, but was composed as she took her seat beside her attorneys. She conversed with Judge Powers, her chief counsel.

QUAILS AT LETTERS.

When she resumed the stand the letters written by Brown to Mrs. Bradley, and containing the protestations of his undying affection, to which she testified yesterday, were identified, and offered in evidence. These will be read later. Mrs. Bradley quailed as they were held before her—the old records of the love which led to her downfall—and she struggled to hide her emotion. Each time she was called upon to state in whose handwriting the letters were she faltered, saying, "Senator Brown's," and at length leaned back in her chair, unable to control herself further.

Following is a sample of the letters, illustrating the character of all:

"Beloved—I love you in the truest, best sense a man can love a woman; not alone for the passion that is so warm between us, but in a higher and truer way. I love to be with you, to hear you; to be close to you. This morning when I got up I kept wishing I could have heard you sing that sweet song last night, that its music might ring in my ears till I saw you again. Good bye, dear wife, good bye for a brief period. I will write every mail. My life, my all is bound up in you. I'm your own only. Be good to me. Love me as I do you. As ever,

"SENATOR."

In another of the letters Senator Brown, referring to the possible marriage, said:

"I am to-day more determined than ever that we shall be before the world all that we are to each other."

Most of the letters were addressed to "Mrs. Dolly Madison Brown."

ACKNOWLEDGED SON AS HIS.

One letter specifically acknowledged little Arthur as "our" child. It read in part:

"My own dear wife—never so near or so dear. I am all your's to-day. Your message came this morning waffling the love of my darling from the Pacific as a chinook waffs its balm over the land.

"Take good denes of our little Arthur Brown. He is your special care. Teach him, have him learn his letters. Keep at him until he has t'o wit and brilliancy of his mother. You remember the quotation: 'Your blood with mine conjoined yet shall mount the throne of kings.'"

While the identification of the hundred or more letters and messages was in progress Dr. Brush of Baltimore of the government's insanity experts drew an anatomical diagram of Mrs. Bradley's head.

Dr. Samuel Ely Jelliffe of New York, an expert in the Thaw trial, examined a number of letters.

The first day of Mrs. Bradley's testimony left few of the crowd that listened to it with dry eyes. Some wept openly. Others stared with overpowering sympathy at the little woman struggling with her own grief. But there was one who sat dry-eyed through it all. Max Brown, son of the man whose misdeeds are the warp and woof of this tale of suffering, leaned forward to catch every faltering word, but his face was tense and drawn, as if he were scarcely able to take the measure of the crushing revelations.

Judge Powers led the witness down to the time when she took up her residence in Salt Lake City.

She told of the position she took under her uncle in the waterworks, which she held her three years and a half and relinquished again because of ill health. A week after she left this position, on September 20, 1893, she married Clarence Bradley.

Two children resulted from the union, Mr. Bradley frequently smoothed back her hair, which was parted at the centre and brushed back on either side. At intervals there was a tired closing of the eyes. Her manner was graceful and pleasing.

In response to Judge Powers' urgings, she told of her membership in the Salt Lake Women's Club, a civic Republican association, and she also said she had been a member of a Poet's Round Table. She related with a glow of pride and a half smile how she became active in politics, being successively secretary of the Salt Lake City Fifth Precinct Committee and secretary of the Republican State Central Committee. Then Powers brought her back to her married life, and Mrs. Bradley winced.

"It was unhappy," she said, closing her eyes and sighing deeply.

In the Summer of 1898 she and her husband ceased to live together. In December, 1905, they were divorced.

"Did you know former Senator Arthur Brown, Mrs. Bradley?" Powers asked gently.

Her lips quivered—her eyes closed and then, as she reopened them and glanced upward, there was a flood of tears, she answered softly "Yes."

When did you first meet him?"

Introduced in Spring of 1902.

"In the Spring of 1902. My uncle WH introduced us during a carriage ride."

"State whether you afterward became better acquainted with him."

Her face was lighted by a smile, and, with the same upward movement of her eyes she answered with a rising inflection: "Yes, I did."

She explained, now in a clear voice, that she and Senator Brown had belonged to the same political party, but though she remembered his election to the United States Senate in 1902, she was opposed to him at that time.

"During 1906 and 1907 you became more intimately acquainted with Senator Brown?" asked Powers.

"During 1906 and 1907."

"Can you describe the nature of the acquaintance?"

Mrs. Bradley began wringing her hands and the tears rolled down her cheeks.

"Our friendship grew into very intimate relations, Judge."

"At any time, Mrs. Bradley, did your acquaintance ripen into a friendship?"

"Yes," she whispered.

10 SAVED FROM DEATH AS FIRE SWEEPS BLOCK

FIREMEN CARRY TO SAFETY MEN AND WOMEN TRAPPED BY FLAMES IN WEST END.

With flames roaring through the only stairway and bursting into every room in the block, ten persons were saved from death at No. 225 Cambridge street at 2 a. m. to-day by being carried down ladders by the firemen of Ladder No. 1.

The building which is a three-story wooden structure, was a fire trap of the worst kind, and the interior is completely ruined.

The fire originated in the Belvidere restaurant on the first floor, probably from an overheated stove. Joseph De Lorenzis, who occupied a room with his wife on the second floor just above, was awakened by smoke. He opened the door and found the stairs cut off by flames. Opening the front window, he called Patrolman Joyce, who was across the street. The officer could not ascend the stairs, but warned the other occupants by hurling missiles against the windows, and pulled in an alarm.

When Ladder Company No. 1 arrived the fire was bursting through the doors leading from the hall to the rooms of the sleepers. Ladders were quickly raised, and Mrs. De Lorenzis was carried down to the street, clad only in her night clothes, and her husband followed.

Mrs. James Parker was next taken down the ladder from the adjoining room in the rear of the second story. Then Mrs. Catherine Flemming and her five children. All were saved without difficulty, though just in time, for by this time the whole front of the building was a furnace. Mrs. Fleming hauled her little son to the ladder, then leaving the burning room herself. The children are Daniel, James, thirteen; Frances, four; Mary, six; George Austin, who also roomed on the second floor, jumped to the ground, but was not hurt. All the tenants lost practically all they had, even their clothing. The block was over forty years old and the damage is not more than $1,000.

ECZEMA DISAPPEARS

Easy Test Demonstrates Rapid Action of New Drug.

According to an interesting little treatise just issued, the use of poison, the new discovery for the cure of eczema and other skin afflictions, begins with a practical demonstration of the work it so quickly accomplishes. Sufferers are only asked to obtain one of the experimental samples (which the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York city, will send to anyone by mail, free of charge) and to apply some to a spot the size of a silver dollar. If the spot is healed in twenty-four hours and it is desired to continue the treatment larger quantities of poison can be obtained at Houghton & Dutton's and all leading drug stores in fifty-cent boxes and large two-dollar jars. Poison stops the itching with first application and proceeds to heal immediately, curing chronic cases in two weeks.—Adv.

WOMAN'S BODY TURNS TO STONE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—The body of Jane Purdy, which was buried two years ago at Cedar Grove Cemetery, Gloucester, N. J., was to-day shipped to relatives at St. Thomas, Canada. While the woman weighed but 125 pounds when she died, the casket weighed a total of 820 pounds. Investigation to discover the mystery resulted in the discovery that the body had turned to stone.

MAN AND WIFE DIE IN GAS-FILLED ROOM

SON FINDS BODIES OF PARENTS IN BED, VICTIMS OF LEAKY JET.

David McDougall, aged forty-five, and his wife, aged forty-eight, were found dead in bed to-day at their home No. 25 Market street, Cambridge, with their bed chamber filled with deadly gas fumes. A strong leak in the gas pipe in their room was found.

They were found by their son David who, alarmed because his mother had not called him went to their room and after repeated calling looked in to find both dead. Another son and daughter of the dead couple were in the home.

The father and mother retired as usual last night. There had been no odor of gas in the house. A search for the gas leak to-day revealed the fact that the deadly fumes were coming from the pipe somewhere in the room. There had never been any indication of a leak before.

Daniel, the nineteen-year-old son, depended on his mother to call him in time to get to work in the morning. To-day he overslept, and when he did awake wondered why his mother had not called him. He called out to her, and when no response came he hastily dressed and went to his parents' room. He was nearly overcome by his gruesome discovery.

The dead man was employed as a clerk by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in Cambridge.

TWO INLAND GALES DUE IN HUB TO-NIGHT

"It's going to be wet," said the weather man this morning.

"There's two storms coming this way, one from the northwest and another from the southwest. The advent of these two storms means a heavy rainfall. In Little Rock, Arkansas, there was a six-inch rainfall yesterday.

"In other respects weather indications are warmer, with easterly and southerly winds, increasing brisk and high. By to-night there will be lots of use for raincoats, rubbers and umbrellas."

COULTHURST PLEDGES HIMSELF TO SWEEPING REFORMS

Independence League Candidate Says in Letter of Acceptance: "I Will End Graft at City Hall, I Will Reduce Boston's Staggering Debt, and I Will Conduct City as Public Corporation, Not as Public Asylum."

Characterizing the Fitzgerald administration as "scandalously incompetent and hopelessly dishonest," and declaring that the success of Hibbard at the polls would mean a continuation of the spoils system, John A. Coulthurst has accepted the Independence League nomination for mayor.

The election of Hibbard, Mr. Coulthurst declares, will mean essentially the turning out of Democratic officeholders and the installing of Republican officeholders in their place—a repetition of the Thomas N. Hart regime.

"I shall accept a non-partisan nomination," he says, "and I am desirous of obtaining the Good Government Association endorsement."

Pledges Self to End Spoils System.

The Coulthrust letter goes directly into the great issues of the Boston campaign. On all sides it is characterized as one of the strongest presentations of the "case for the city" that has ever been made.

The Independence League candidate himself is abolish the spoils system. In a thorough reorganization at City Hall, he says, he will seek the advice of the Boston Finance Commission and of prominent business men without regard to party affiliation.

Elected, Mr. Coulthurst says, he will see to it that no honest and efficient city employe will be dismissed.

He promises retrenchment, calling attention to the fact that the city's indebtedness has increased ninety per cent in twelve years, while the population increased twenty-three per cent.

Asks Mayor to Explain Appointments

To hide the mismanagement and extravagance which has jumped the tax rate, he says, valuations have been increased on suburban realty.

Mr. Coulthurst wants the Mayor to explain his appointments of James H. Doyle, John J. Leahy, Michael W. Norris, James F. Nolan and Michael J. Mitchell.

He also wants to know things about the liberal paid advertising of public service corporations in the pages of the Republic Fitzgerald's weekly. The Mayor, he says, has been of aid to the public service corporations.

"He promised well, but he performed badly," says the League nominee.

"As Mayor," he says, "I will conduct a great public corporation, and not a political asylum."

November 18, 1907.

To the Voters of Boston:

I accept the nomination for the office of Mayor which has been given me by the Independence League, and I shall accept a non-partisan nomination which has been tendered me by a committee of independent citizens and friends not affiliated with the Independence League, and I am desirous of obtaining the Good Government endorsement.

I do this with a full sense of the responsibilities it imposes and with feelings of gratitude for the honor conferred.

My candidacy has not originated in selfish ambition, but springs rather from an active for the city of Boston, my knowledge of the deplorable conditions which exist in the administration of its public affairs, and my desire to perform to the best of my ability the work of redeeming it from the slough of politics and financial despond into which it has fallen.

So far is this true that when it was first urged upon me to become a candidate, at a time when it seemed that some independent citizen of Boston might be agreed upon by the Republican machine and the Good Government Association, I positively refused to enter the list of candidates. It was not until the selfish quartermaship of the Republican machine above and the Good Government and municipal reform than for the control of the patronage at City Hall, had been exhibited in their attitude toward the advances of the Good Government Association, that I allowed the use of my name.

Stop Spoils System In All Departments

I realize, however, and my election must depend upon the fact, that this selfish partisanship of both the Democratic and Republican machines is not shared by a the great bulk of the Democratic and Republican voters.

The situation which now confronts the independent voter who has no favors to solicit at City Hall, and who is only interested in a clean, honest, economic, businesslike administration, unless he decides to stand with me upon the non-partisan platform and principles heretofore announced by me, and to co-operate with me before election by his vote, and after election by his cordial support of my administration, if I am elected, is to choose between a partisan Democratic candidate with his scandalously incompetent and hopelessly dishonest administration behind him, with a personal following, now holding jobs or getting patronage, or living in the expectation of getting something, in case of his re-election, and a partisan Republican candidate, the representative of the Republican city machine, whose election will mean essentially the turning out of Democratic officeholders and the installing of Republican officeholders in their places—a repetition of the Thomas N. Hart regime.

I confess that it is impossible to hope for municipal reform unless the appointment of municipal officeholders is taken out of politics, burdens of taxation and extravagant administrations, Republican and Democratic alike, we have been going from bad to worse because all jobs, large and small, all contracts, large and small, with few exceptions, have been given as political rewards. This shows itself in the increased tax rate, and in the enormously increased indebtedness of the city.

No Honest Official Need Fear for His Job

I have pledged myself, and I now renew the pledge, that if I am elected Mayor of Boston, the spoils system shall be abolished in City Hall.

This will apply to the appointments of heads of departments, to subordinate positions in the public service; to city workers, to all contracts for work and supplies. I shall consult the best business interests of the city of Boston to assist me in making these appointments. I shall seek the advice of the Finance Commission and of Boston's best business men, irrespective of party, in regard to the reorganization of all departments of the municipal administration.

On the other hand, no honest and efficient city employe who is rendering honest service to the city of Boston need fear for his job if I am elected Mayor.

He should welcome my administration because in his case merit and not political pull will insure him the permanency of his position and will bring him deserved promotion. I will not, as did ex-Mayor Hart through his heads of departments, discharge the employes of the city by wholesale to replace them by others for political purposes.

I will not discharge any of the men who have rendered faithful service in the past and who, because of the load of years, are now not physically strong.

Human considerations will not permit them to be turned out to starve or become charges on the city's charity. Until the old age pension problem is solved they must be retained. No honest and competent employe who renders in service an equivalent for his compensation will be discharged.

Awful Burden of Debt: Increase in Tax Rate

Boston's net city and county debt on November 1, 1907, was in round figures $71,000,000, an increase in twelve years of about 90 per cent., while the population has increased about 23 per cent. In the meantime, and in addition, Boston's share of the metropolitan net debt for water, sewers, parks, boulevards and armories has been increasing to such an extent that it now reaches the alarming total of $38,000,000 in round figures, and further still Boston's share of the State's net debt is in round figures $3,000,000, a grand total of $114,000,000 in round figures, which is about $185 per man, woman and child in the city of Boston. It requires $7,000,000 in round figures, principally derived from taxes, to pay interest and sinking fund requirements upon these vast obligations. The increase of the city and county debt during twenty-one months of the present administration, from January 31, 1906, to November 1, 1907, has been in round figures $4,500,000.

In the twelve years, from 1895 to 1907, the tax rate has increased $3.10 per thousand, from $12.80 to $15.90; and in order to hide further extravagance and mismanagement assessors have omitted over certain classes, especially in the suburban districts, have been largely increased.

I have already pledged myself, and I do now renew my pledge, that this municipal indebtedness shall be my chief solicitude if elected Mayor, that the Hub's water mark shall have been reached during my present administration.

In the Democratic candidate for re-election in the fifteen months given out as a part of the primaries, where at least 31 per cent. could possibly, in light of the 1906 recount, 50 per cent of the Democratic voters registered their protest against his administration by ignoring the head of the ticket in office, and, where the opposed to bring his administration out among the citizens of the city in order that the truth may be told.

Let me call his attention to certain things and respectfully ask an explanation for the enlightenment of the voters.

I will refer in the first place to some of his election promises, and then to their fulfilment.

Promise No. 1.

"Should I be elected Mayor, if I find incompetence, I will cut it out. If I find graft in any office, I will stop it and will expose the graft and fail the grafters." (Boston Globe, November 11, 1905.)

Promise No. 2.

"My election will mean: lower taxes; the purge of Boston from its boss rule; the control of the people by private and corporate interests will cease; incompetency will be stamped out; graft will be exposed." (Fitzgerald's weekly, BOSTON AMERICAN, December 11, 1905.)

Promise No. 3.

"I will do all in my power to give to the citizens of Boston a clean, honest administration, free from graft and crooked dealing." (Boston Globe, November 26, 1905.)

Promise No. 4.

"If I am elected chief magistrate of this city I will keep constantly in mind the protection of the city treasury and an absolutely honest desire to exact a dollar's worth of value for every dollar of outlay." (Boston American, December 2, 1905.)

Promise No. 5.

"It will be my ambition if elected Mayor to keep a high standard of performance constantly before myself and to prove that I am able to serve the largest interests of this great metropolitan city." (Boston Globe, November 9, 1905.)

Performance.

Let him explain what incompetence was cut out, what waste was stopped, what graft was opposed by him; what grafters were jailed with his assistance; why the taxes were not lowered, why the city treasury was not protected from the padding of coal contracts, in the purchase of other supplies, in the granting of contracts for sewer work by securing competitive bids, in keeping down the price rather than allowing them to increase as in the case of contracts for sand and supplies. I shall consult the best business experience and integrity of the city of Boston to assist me in making these appointments. I shall seek the advice of the Finance Commission and of Boston's best business men, irrespective of party, in regard to the reorganization of all departments of the municipal administration.

On the other hand, no honest and efficient city employe who is rendering honest service to the city of Boston need fear for his job if I am elected Mayor.

He should welcome my administration because in his case merit and not political pull will insure him the permanency of his position and will bring him deserved promotion. I will not, as did ex-Mayor Hart through his heads of departments, discharge the employes of the city by wholesale to replace them by others for political purposes.

I will not discharge any of the men who have rendered faithful service in the past and who, because of the load of years, are now not physically strong.

Human considerations will not permit them to be turned out to starve or become charges on the city's charity. Until the old age pension problem is solved they must be retained. No honest and competent employe who renders in service an equivalent for his compensation will be discharged.

Performance.

Let him explain the $6,000,000 increase who, after they had done their day's work as required by law and by their employment, were forced, intimidated, bulldozed, coerced to go out after working hours from their homes to do political work in his interest and at his command.

I assert that the Czar of Russia in dealing with the Russian serfs could not have acted more outrageously, more despotically than did my Democratic opponent in the State campaign in the treatment of city employes.

THE CITY DEBT.

Implied Promise No. 7.

"The financial conditions confronting the Mayor of the city for the next two years will be more difficult than any with which our city administration has been faced in the present year witnessed the highest tax rate, $16 a thousand, that the city has known for a long time.

THE NET DEBT OF THE CITY HAS ALSO INCREASED BY LOANS AND BONDS UNTIL TO-DAY THE TAXES PAID BY OUR CITIZENS ARE AMONG THE HIGHEST, IF NOT ACTUALLY THE HIGHEST PER CAPITA IN THE COUNTRY. * * * HIGHER TAXES MEAN HIGHER RENTALS. WAGE EARNERS CANNOT AFFORD THE HIGH RENTALS, AND MANY PROPERTY OWNERS CANNOT MEET THEIR OBLIGATIONS.—Boston Globe, October 23, 1905.

Performance.

Let him explain in view of the foregoing statements of the financial condition of the city of Boston and the city tax rate and the burdens borne by the taxpayers, the wage-earners, and the property owners, in the two years, the two years he has forgotten his promises and pledges; in view of the fact that he is, in my particular; his administration has added a total of nearly $4,500,000 to the city debt.

Conclusion.

To sum up the situation our city is staggering under a load of city debt which has been largely increased by the stupidity or dishonesty, or both, of city officials under an administration whose head deserves the most of his time and his best efforts to his selfish purposes to the neglect of the citizens' interests.

The disease of this body politic may well be described as "Fitzgeraldism," and a drastic remedy must be applied at once.

Whether I am able to do this with your co-operation is a question you, my fellow-citizens, must answer. My ability to perform the task must be discussed by others. For my fidelity you must consult those whom I have represented in the Legislature and those with whom I was associated in the Roslindale-Arcade fare fight and in the Boston gas fight of 1905. My promise will be free and wholly exclusive of political regards for those who help me. They may be considered into this phrase, "GENUINE MUNICIPAL REFORM AND A SQUARE DEAL FOR ALL THE CITIZENS OF BOSTON."

If elected, my administration will be given on the theory that the city of Boston is a business corporation and not a political asylum.

I will receive the advice of all honest men interested in good government, but will act as my own judgment from all the information bearing on the subject under investigation is examined with the care which the time available permits and the importance of the question requires.

Will Wear No Man's Collar.

I will wear no man's collar; nor will I be the servant of any clique or faction, or class or organization. I will be the servant of the whole people and will give that consideration to the highest or the humblest in the community which is due on all occasions from one man to another, of any race against others, nor will I wage war against them in the hands of individuals, partnerships or corporations. I will submit to contributions from any source and will be under no obligations to any one. I will attempt to do justice to all and injury to none.

I will use my office or political prestige to enrich myself, my relatives, friends or political supporters, but will go out of office as poor as I entered it. I will never shirk responsibility from the misconduct or incompetence of appointees, for the charter places responsibility for the proper conduct of all city departments upon the Mayor, and I will meet it without flinching or charging error to my predecessors as an inherited sin.

I believe mine is a great opportunity to do good for this city. I am conscious of my responsibilities, and with God's help I will discharge them for the public welfare.

MRS. BRADLEY RESUMES HER TRAGIC STORY

Events That Led Up to Shooting of Senator Brown Told.

"When did you first observe anything of that kind on his part?"

"It was very marked after August, 1906."

"When did you first find you loved him?"

She hesitated, wiped the tears from her eyes and an expression of great tenderness came into her face.

"I cannot say just when, judge," she answered.

"Previous to that time, had he expressed a feeling for you?"

"Oh, many, many times."

He Often Expressed Affection.

"Describe his manner toward you."

"I cannot describe it," she exclaimed, her face alight, except that it was tender and affectionate, always——always."

"State whether he made any protestation of love for you."

"Yes—often, often."

"Tell the jury how strongly you came to love him."

Her eyes opened wide—she spread out her hands, and her face became radiant.

"I cannot tell that, judge. It is beyond expression."

Now, with the tears again flowing down her cheeks, she told of the birth of their first child, in February, 1906.

"Tell the jury, Mrs. Bradley, how you came to enter into these relations."

"Oh, the Senator told me a great deal about his life. He told me he was a most unhappy man, a most wretched man. He began to tell me of the terrible intimate secrets of his life. I told the Senator such things could only end in sorrow and grief.

"He came to see me many times, and finally, in November, he began to come to see me at my house at unusually hours. I told him he must stop it, that he must not do that, but the Senator was such a strange man. He said:

"'Darling, we are going through life together, you and I. I want us to go through life together.'"

Tells of Christening.

She told with a glow of pride of the christening of Arthur Brown, Jr., by Rev. David Utter of Denver. Senator Brown was present and held the infant in his arms.

"Senator Brown came to see me often and said he wanted to get a divorce," Mrs. Bradley continued. "I told not to see him. I objected to his coming, and I would not hear to the divorce. I told him I just would not break up his home. I felt so guilty all the time. I protested so many times, but he would come to me and say, 'Oh, darling, you are the only bright spot in my life,' and he would not hear of anything else.

"Did you believe in his affection, Mrs. Bradley?"

She sobbed aloud.

She then told she became—corroborating Dr. Whitney.

"The Senator insisted on breaking up his home," she continued, "and I insisted that he should not. Our relation had become known and every one was bitter to ward us. We did not know just what to do. That is the way it happened.

"A pollution, you see, for the man who was guilty of the crime.

"He came to see me frequently," she attained. "I remember once he came on the express had nominated some one to for Senator, and he was so dispirited. But he told me that he was not only so disappointed as he knew I would be. I broke down and cried. Finally he said, 'Now I will go on with you. You have been putting me off time and time again, and now we are going on together, no matter what you say.'

"He wrote to me as often as five times a day, and when Arthur Brown, Jr., was born, the Senator, arriving in Salt Lake a few weeks later, took the child in his arms and exclaimed:

"'This is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased.'"

"State your feelings when in the presence of Brown," said Powers.

"He controlled me absolutely."

"Were you happy or unhappy with him?"

"Oh," she cried, her face once more lighting up, "I was very, very happy."

She Describes the Senator.

"Describe Senator Brown as well as you can, Mrs. Bradley. What sort of a man was he? What were his attainments?"

Then she erected this monument to his memory:

"He was a brilliant man, a big man. He was extravagantly fond of his friends and most bitter toward his enemies. He was a vindictive man, a scholarly man. He dominated everything and everybody round him. His intellectual attainments were great.

"Did he ever make any plans for Arthur?

"Yes, he looked at him and said: 'I must make him a judge of the Supreme Court of the United States.'"

In the Fall of 1901 Mrs. Bradley left Salt Lake.

"Senator Brown had insisted that we get a divorce," she said. "He told me we owed it to our little boy to do this and that he wanted me to go away so that I would not be mixed up in the turmoil and scandal.

WONDER GLASS SHOWS HAUNTS OF SANTA CLAUS

There arrived in Boston yesterday the first few sections of a monster telescope of a most unusual sort. It is so large that it could not be sent from the places where it was made all in one piece, and it will be several days before the whole of it is here.

This telescope is not for the purpose of gazing on the starry skies. It shows a far more fascinating sight. For it was constructed for the use of children, and when all its parts have arrived it will be set up for the use of the children in one of the big department stores of the city.

The telescope was built in the land of Make-Believe, by Santa Claus's workmen, in order that this year the children who visit one particular store during the Christmas season may see exactly what Santa Claus home country is like. Through the great tube can be plainly seen the factories where all the toys are made, the snowy fields and mountains in which the dwelling of the good saint stands, the caves, the sledges, the reindeer and gnomes who work the year round to make the children's Christmas.

Santa Claus's own palaces is directly in the field of the telescope, whose magic lenses are different from any of ordinary glass, which can show only those things which anybody can see. In this telescope only good children can see the beautiful land of Santa Clause, the cold folks, who have forgotten where the land of Make-Believe is, cannot see it, and of course the children who have been naughty can not see it.

And every host of all, this telescope is only one of the many things Santa is sending to his favorite headquarters in Boston, the glittering, spangled Wonderland full of the most beautiful playthings in the world. In a few days Santa's men will have the telescope in place. Then he will come himself to see that all is ready, and finally the Wonderland will be thrown open to the children.

GIRL WHO SHOT SWEETHEART IS HELD IN $3,000

Pretty Christine Pepilo Arraigned on Charge of Attempted Murder.

BEVERLY, Nov. 20.—Charged with attempted murder, pretty nineteen-year-old Christine Pipilo, who yesterday shot and stabbed her sweetheart, Antonio Geary, because he refused to marry her, was arraigned before Judge George B. Sears in the First District Court at Salem this morning and held for two years in $3,000 bail.

She was unable to secure bail and was sent to the Salem jail.

Geary is in a serious condition at the City Hospital in Beverly with two bullet wounds in his abdomen and a stiletto cut in his breast, and when the girl's case was continued for two weeks the idea was to await the result of his fight with his wounds, which the doctors fear this morning may cause his death.

Miss Pipilo refused to-day to discuss the shooting, but her mother declares that she was justified.

"He promised to marry her and broke his promise," declared Mrs. Pipilo.

According to the police version of the affair, the couple met last night in a poolroom on Rantoul street, where Miss Pipilo is employed in her father's grocery. The girl wanted Geary to marry her, which he refused to do. In her anger she carried a stiletto and revolver. On Geary's refusal, she is alleged to have threatened her life and to have pulled the stiletto from her pocket, striking the man on the breast and causing a slight wound.

Geary Seizes Revolver.

She also drew the revolver, but Geary seized the weapon and persuaded her to restore it to her pocket.

According to Miss Pipilo, the two walked together after this incident, continuing the dispute. Geary, she says, then accused her of keeping company with other men, upon which she lost control of herself, and drawing the revolver again, she exclaimed: "I will kill you!"

"Go ahead!" returned Geary, throwing up his hands.

In her excitement she pulled the trigger, firing three shots, two of which took effect.

After seeing what she had done, the girl pointed the weapon at her own head, but Geary, wounded as he was, grappled with her and wrenched it away from her, nearly with loss of blood. Then fell to the ground.

Rough Course for Love Affair.

Geary's love affair with Miss Pipilo has been a long drawn out and troubled experience. At one period he was so deeply that he insisted on calling at the store where she was employed at all hours and detaining her on the street, greatly to her annoyance. Finally she complained to the police about him, and they parted.

A reconciliation soon followed, and the outcome was that she insists on being married, while he is unwilling.

During the first hour there was a quieter tone to the trading and prices were fairly well held during the first hour.

The range of fluctuations in the most important railroad stocks was less than 1 per cent. In the industrial group Smelting was most prominent and sustained extreme loss noted in the first hour, falling to 59¾, against 61¾ at the close yesterday. Minor changes in other industrials were of only small fractions. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds irregular.

The Twelfth Ward Bank resumed to-day after being closed since October 24 with the New York National Bank refused to clear for it longer. The management remains the same except Arthur K. Wood succeeds the late George B. Brown as first vice-president and director.

THE REAL TRIMMER.

The real trimmer is the man who helps elect a trimmer—THE VOTER.—Denis McCarthy's answer in Trimmer Contest that has been awarded $10 prize.

"TRIMMER" PRIZE CAPTURED BY MAN WHO NAMES "VOTER"

Denis McCartay of Charlestown Blames People Who Elect a "Trimmer.

To Denis McCarthy of No. 23 Devens street, Charlestown, is awarded the prize of ten dollars for the best answer to the question, "Who is this trimmer? This question was asked over the cartoon published in the BOSTON AMERICAN showing a hand with a pair of shears busily engaged in clipping campaign pledges and broken promises.

All Boston became interested. Hundreds of answers were received. The large majority selected John F. Fitzgerald, mayor of Boston, as the answer.

Mr. McCarthy, however, decided that there was another trimmer worse even than Fitzgerald. This is Mr. McCarthy's answer, the one for which the prize was awarded:

"A real trimmer is the man who helps elect a trimmer—the voter."

This is Mr. McCarthy's own story:

By Denis McCarthy.

"The man who is influenced by the glad hand of the politician seeking office and helps to elect him is the real trimmer. He falls to promises made and gives his vote in return, even though he is pretty well satisfied that the fulfillment of the promises has no intention of making good. Fitzgerald made a fat old promise before he was elected Mayor, not to forget them even before he got into office. So don't blame the man who is seeking office with which to further his own ends, but the voter who casts his ballot for him.

"If trimmers are to be kept out of office the voter must do his duty by killing him on election day by means of his ballot. It's all up to the voters.

"When I read the contest in the BOSTON AMERICAN asking for the best answers of "Who is this trimmer?" I knew at once that it might be Fitzgerald, but as I figured it out it struck me that the real trimmer is the man who puts him in office. That's why I gave my answer as I did.

"I voted for Fitzgerald last time, but I don't intend to do it this year. I think pretty well of John A. Coulthurst, the Independence League candidate. Fitzgerald can't have my vote. I refuse to help a trimmer to office again if I know it."

Mr. McCarthy is married and has three children. He has been a Fitzgerald man for the last eighteen years, being a car inspector for the Boston & Maine Railroad. He is a registered voter in precinct 5, Ward 5, Charlestown.

Rebuke Boss Mayor at Polls.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

If Mayor Fitzgerald is not trimming this year when he as boss named candidates for the office of district attorney, register of probate and sheriff, and will not declare himself as he did last year on the school committee, then I don't know what a trimmer is. He has been false to the people he used to get elected two years ago, "The People Against the Boss," but on December 12 next the people will register their protest by ballot against the boss Mayor, and the people's choice for Mayor will be John A. Coulthrust, and the Mayor will get what his Republican chairman of the Board of Aldermen received at the primaries November 5.
JOHN J. REAGAN.

Trimmer Must Step Down.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Who is the trimmer, who with smiling face
His promises can't recall?
Who has made his office a sad disgrace?
Who has proved himself false to all?

Next month the voters will say, "We're quits."
The trimmer will step down and out
For the man with the shears is John F. Fitz,
The Mayor of Boston town.

Draper and Lodge Share Honor.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

A trimmer is a person who does the greatest amount of harm to the taxpayer and workingman. The man recently elected to the office of Lieutenant-Governor practically made every man connected with his industries at Hopedale turn his union card in to the office and declare himself subject to Mr. Draper's ruling or else get out of his employ and miss out of Hopedale, as the drapers own Hopedale.

But the real trimmer is the man behind Draper, the man who wants Hibbard for Mayor. That man is Henry Cabot Lodge. He has been "trimming" this city and State about long enough.

We want Coulthurst for Mayor and we'll get him.

WHO IS THE TRIMMER

He promised us a city clean,

We thought he meant just what he said,
So honored him, our city's head—
Did Fitz?

But gas of graft has come to light,
And bright reform has been our flight.
Instead of Fitz
So fellow cits, get after him
And show the trimmer how to trim—
Give him fits.

INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE NAMES RICHARDS

Nominated at Cambridge Primaries as Candidate for Mayoralty.

Albin M. Richards received the Independence League nomination for Mayor of Cambridge in the primaries held in that city yesterday.

Mr. Richards is president of the Cambridge Independence League and chairman of the League Executive Committee. He had the unanimous endorsement of the committee for the mayoralty nomination.

The Independence League voters found considerable trouble in casting their ballots at the primaries. Even Mr. Richards himself, the chairman of the League Committee of the ticket, was held up for a few minutes before he could get his Independence League ballot. Argument was made that he was enrolled as a Democrat, in spite of the fact that he had only changed his enrollment to the Independence League. As a matter of fact, Mr. Richards was the first voter in Cambridge to change his enrollment to the League.

Other voters found similar trouble, in some cases the wardens claimed that errors had been made in the registration clerks, so that the change in enrollment was not properly recorded.

In Ward 4 a two young men who had never voted before were told they were enrolled as Democrats. This was absurd on the face of it, as the young men had still to cast their first ballot. An effort was made to pass a Democratic ballot on one of them, but the young man refused and stood on his rights to vote an Independence League ballot.

Other nominees of the Independence League in Cambridge are: For councilor, Augustus Seaver; for Aldermen, A. A. Jones, Edward F. Doherty, Edward A. Monahan, Lewis G. Little, Ira F. Colby, Gustave Johnson, James Meyer, Edward Cassidy; for school committee, A. W. Jones; for Common Council, William H. Behnke.

STAR SINGER MISSES TRAIN AND STEAMSHIP

Basso of Grand Opera Company Left Behind by Troupe Now on Way to America.

Word has just been received at the Boston office of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company in the Colonial building that the principals, chorus and ballet of the troupe, are now en voyage to Boston on the White Star liner Romanic, with the exception of Andrea Perella de Segurola, the noted basso. And thereby hangs a lyric tale.

Segurola's non-appearance, as none who heard him with the San Carlo company at the Park Theatre last season will testify, has the Segurola cannot catch a train.

Missed the Liner Romanic.

Consequently when he started to Genoa, where he was to embark on the Romanic, he failed to connect with the train. Thus he missed the liner. And, when the main company was safely embarked and steaming blithely over the blue Mediterranean toward Boston, Segurola was frantically cabling the Boston offices that the steamer had neglected to wait for him.

The Boston office did some rapid figuring with a Continental Bradshaw and then wired Segurola to catch the Paris mail across the channel and take the Liverpool in time to connect with the Carmania which left Queenstown on November 23 and is due in New York on the 30th. This will make Segurola only two days behind the others. Only he must connect with the Carmania or he will be late a second time.

122 in Company.

The company is now aboard the Romanic and expected here November 28, includes 122 members in all.

Among the principals are Mesdames Milly Bramonia, Tina Dessau and Annita Perego, soprano; Maria Claessens and Guglielmina Marchi, mezzo-soprano; Messrs. Carlo Dani, Ernesto Giacone, Giuseppe Operizio, tenors; Ramon Blanchardi, Rodolfo Fornari, Adamo Galperin and Attilio Pulcini, baritones; and Guido Rossi and Luigi Tavecchia, bassos. Madam Olitzka, specially engaged to sing "Isrul" in Lohengrin, has already sailed from Liverpool. Conductor Cimini and his assistants are already in this country.

K. OF C. GREET COULTHURST AT BIG FAIR

Forgets Politics to Aid Bunker Hill Council to Increase Building Fund.

John A. Coulthurst, Independence League candidate for Mayor, left his politics at his political headquarters last night, turned the key, and hustled for No. 44 High street, Charlestown, to enjoy a night off at the bazaar in aid of the building fund of Bunker Hill Council, No. 62, Knights of Columbus. The new clubhouse was crowded to its capacity.

"Most delightful evening I've had since the campaign began," said the League candidate for Mayor. "So interesting, that I almost forgot there is an election on. Mr. Coulthurst was warmly received on all sides. He was kept busy shaking hands.

Some of the young ladies tried to get him to say which is the prettiest table at the bazaar. The candidate proved himself a diplomat. He said the question was as much a puzzle to him as to everybody else, for the agreed to think it over. The doll table, decorated in evergreen intermingled with American Beauty roses, is the centre of attraction in the main hall. There are also the "Columbus" table, the "American" table and tables representing the various parishes of the Charlestown district. In the basement is a series of side shows and attractions, calculated to please the old and young alike.

FIGHTS FOR HIS PIGS IN COURT

W. W. Rawson, the millionaire market gardner of Arlington, is fighting for his right to keep swine in the town, the order of restriction by the Board of Health being contested by him in the Superior Court at East Cambridge.

Witnesses for Mr. Rawson to-day and yesterday testified that the big Rawson piggery is well kept and that they, who live in the vicinity, have not been inconvenienced or endangered by the odors.

The case is still on.

CURE THAT CATARRH

OR SUFFER ALL YOUR LIFE

Catarrh affects you in many ways. It may attack the Ears, causing all kinds of Head Noises, Discharging Ears and Deafness. It may involve the Bronchial Tubes, paving the way for Pneumonia. Asthma, Chronic Bronchitis and Consumption. It may pass to the Stomach, causing Catarrh of the Stomach, and making it easy for Cancers and Ulcers of the Stomach to follow.

In the Nose it produces all kinds of discomfort, headache, pains over eyes, stuffiness of the one or both sides, a great flow of disgusting yellow or green pus or matter, scales of dried mucus, horribly smelling breath, etc. Not only this, but the membrane may be eaten through and the bones of the nose destroyed, causing the "saddle nose" so often seen.

Now, there's a positive cure for all this right here in this office in the famous Inhalatorium treatment introduced into Boston by us. This treatment is particularly potent in the older cases. We have scores of patients who have tried other treatments unsuccessfully, who are being rapidly cured by our Inhalatorium treatment.

A Reliable Remedy for the

Whiskey and Beer Habit

Very few men become drunkards because they like liquor. It is frequently the moderate drinker, who before he realizes his condition, has become a drunkard. The nervous system, having become accustomed to stimulants, is unable to do the same amount or quality of work without liquor, hence the victim drinks more and more. This is a state of disease and should be treated by Orrine. It destroys the desire for liquor, so that the victim is not missed. There is no loss of time or detention from work when it is used.

Orrine is prepared in two forms—No. 1, the secret remedy, which can be used in food or drink without the knowledge of the patient; and No. 2, for those who take the remedy of their own free will. Both forms are guaranteed. A registered guarantee in every box.

Treatise on how to cure drunkenness free on request. The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C. The price of either form is $1.00 a box, making the cost of the complete cure less than one-tenth what it is usually charged at sanitariums, with a guarantee that the expense will be nothing unless a cure is gained. Mail orders filled in plain sealed packages on receipt of price.

Orrine is for sale by James' Five Dime Stores, Boston.

RAISE FUNDS TO SAVE OLD ROYALL HOUSE

Medford Association Making House to House Canvass for Necessary $4,500.

To purchase the historic Royall House in Medford, that it may be preserved as a museum for patriotic and historic relics, the members of the Royall House Association, an organization founded to accomplish this purpose in making a house-to-house canvass in Medford soliciting subscriptions to raise the required amount.

Already the association has succeeded in raising $5,500, and in order that the house may pass into the hands of the society on January 1, it is necessary that further subscriptions amounting to $4,500 be received.

It is intended that the purchase price be raised by popular subscription, rather than by large donations, and to this end the members of the association are soliciting small sums.

The Royall House, as called, is situated on Main street, Medford, between Royal and George streets. It was built early in the seventeenth century by Governor Winthrop, who was the original proprietor of the estate. The estate was sold to Colonel Isaac Royall, sr., in 1732, and he rebuilt the house, built slave quarters and lavishly decorated the estate. During the years of Boston the house was occupied by Generals Stark, Lee and Sullivan, being brigade headquarters for Washington's army on the north of Boston.

The buildings on the estate are well preserved to-day and are situated in the midst of a natural park. It is the intention of the Royall House Association to immediately occupy the building and it will be used as a meeting place for classes and societies.

A movement is also started by one of the patriotic societies to use a portion of the premises, provided the contemplated purchase is made, for historical and patriotic education for children.

WORSE THAN ONIONS

Bad Breath from Indigestion Cannot Be Overcome With Perfumes.

All of us suffer from bad breath—sometimes our own, but oftener that of our friends.

Nine-tenths of this comes from some stomach trouble, and cannot be overcome by breath perfumes or any other palliative measures.

If you occasionally have a bad breath; if there is a feeling of heaviness and acid gulpings of undigested food; if the stomach burns or smarts; if there is sleeplessness, nervousness, headaches or any other of the many symptoms of indigestion, use Mi-o-na stomach tablets and get well.

Mi-o-na is not a mere digestive nor a physic, but a tonic remedy that strengthens the muscles of the stomach and bowels so that the flow of gastric juices is increased, and the food is digested naturally and does not rest in the stomach to ferment and poison the breath with nauseous odors.

A little 50-cent box of Mi-o-na stomach tablets lasts for a couple of weeks, and will ward off a dozen mild attacks of indigestion. If you suffer with a chronic case of stomach trouble, the use of Mi-o-na for a reasonable length of time will give you an absolute and complete cure.

If you want to enjoy your food and never suffer from indigestion, use Mi-o-na. It is the only remedy that is relied upon as a certainty to-day, relieving the worst troubles of indigestion and assimilation, and making a complete cure.

Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere for 50 cents, and we positively guarantee to refund your money should you purchase a box and be dissatisfied with results. Write for free sample, addressing Booth's Mi-o-na, Box 977, Buffalo, N. Y.

HITCHCOCK REFUSES TO GIVE EVIDENCE

At Chanler Hearing Says He Fears Answers May Incriminate Him.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Raymond Hitchcock, the actor, who was called to the witness stand yesterday afternoon in the Chanler criminal libel suit, when asked if William Astor Chanler had been at his Long Island home when two little girls were there, took the astonishing position that an answer might incriminate him.

The stand of the actor was more surprising in view of certain facts which already have been brought out. According to Mr. Chanler's testimony, Hitchcock was his intimate friend; they were constantly associated, and on the morning after an attempt at blackmail he was the person the actor sent to the home of Hitchcock's former servants, present in the house on the Sunday when the children were there. Have already testified that Chanler was also present.

Former Judge William K. Olcott, one of Mr. Hearst's attorneys, put the direct question which led to Mr. Hitchcock's surprising answer as soon as the actor took the stand.

Refuses to Answer.

"On a Sunday in the latter half of 1906 was William Astor Chanler present at your home when two little girls were there?" was the question.

"I'm under indictment, Judge Olcott," said Mr. Hitchcock in a husky voice, "and have to fall back on my constitutional rights in refusing to answer any questions. And at a real from my counsel, District Attorney Garvan, who is trying the case for Mr. Chanler, he added: "For fear that it might tend to incriminate me in some unknown way."

"You say in some unknown way," observed Judge Olcott. "Is there any way in which Mr. Chanler's presence on a certain occasion might tend to incriminate you?"

If friends of Mr. Chanler, who were sprinkled through the court room, thought the actor would take this opportunity, if he truthfully could, of clearing his friend and neighbor, they were disappointed.

Sustains Objection.

Mr. Garvan promptly objected to the question and Judge Wyatt said Hitchcock had the right to refuse to answer.

Judge Olcott explained that his question did not involve testimony of any criminal nature happening when the Vocck and Von Hagen girls were present.

He could not see how an answer as to Mr. Chanler's presence would tend to incriminate or degrade the actor. He pointed out that he was not seeking to bring out something that had not already been admitted.

"Having once admitted that the two little girls were present at his house," continued Mr. Olcott, "it can't possibly tend to incriminate him to say if William Astor Chanler also was there."

Reads Actor's Replies.

Judge Wyatt declined to order the witness to answer, and Mr. Olcott then asked Mr. Hitchcock if he had not already testified in the magistrate's court of the Seventh District, on October 24, that the two little girls had been at his home. The attorney read from a transcript of the actor's sworn statement, at the hearing before the magistrate.

"I won't answer any questions," said Mr. Hitchcock, drawing into the neck of his sister and propping his chin with a gloved hand. "I think I have the right to fall back on my constitutional rights on the ground that it would tend to incriminate of degrade me in any manner."

Mr. Olcott declared that until yesterday morning he had been assured absolutely that Mr. Hitchcock would testify. He asked for an adjournment for the production of further witnesses, and Judge Wyatt set the hearing this afternoon at 3 o'clock, when it will be completed.

Horse Show Takes Air of Vanderbilt Family Fete

Society, in Silk and Diamonds, Turns Out in Billion-Dollar Crowd.

BY LANGDON SMITH.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—With the Duchess of Marlborough sitting at one end of the oval, Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt and Lady Calthea at the other, and the rest of the Vanderbilts scattered here and there along the line, the horse show took on the air of a family function.

One could scarcely have thrown a tennis ball without hitting a Vanderbilt. Miss Gladys was not there, but her fiance, Count Szechenyi, was, and looked politely bored the whole afternoon.

If not exclusively a Vanderbilt affair, the show is surely more of a society function than for years past. The non-box holding people are conspicuously absent, and the ticket speculators are badly bitten. All day they offered tickets at $2 a seat for which they paid $3.25.

The real backbone of the show lies in the great circle of boxes. As the day progressed they fairly bristled with social and financial celebrities, who were there not only to see, but to be seen.

Billion Dollars Represented.

A billion dollars was easily represented in the crowd, but they could not have proved it by a reading of their checks.

In the morning the Garden was practically empty. There were not a hundred people in the place. In the afternoon the house was thinly sprinkled, about fifty boxes being occupied.

In the evening society came in silken droves. Diamonds began to sparkle, and gave for the effect of variegated seats, the show began to assume the old fervor and swing.

Most of the people along the promenade turned their backs to the horses and stared curiously at the occupants of the boxes. Many of them, possibly custom designers, took pencil and pause and made sketches, and conspicuously, of the gowns they admired.

A very thin man with a wonderful mane walked up to the Vanderbilt box, where the hostess of Marlborough sat, and put a pair of eyeglasses and deliberately stared her out of countenance. In all the long annoyance she did not shine it. She simply turned her back and went on talking with her friends.

The old and distinct the crowd is the least. The people continued to study, the nice, dicey, gossip and exchange curious glances.

Berry Wall's Gaudy Waistcoat.

Berry Wall was there with a waistcoat the like of which social men has never seen. It looked like a Japanese declaration of independence.

The opera did not seem to hurt the evening attendance to any extent. After the recess, the boxes again filled rapidly and the promenade was thronged until a late hour.

BIG YALE GAME BOGUS TICKET PLOT BLOCKED

What is believed to be a giant plot to turn out a batch of counterfeit tickets for the Yale-Harvard football game has been nipped in the bud in the arrest of William Leighton, alias Brooks, of Boston, and a Maine engraver, who gave his name as Fred Patrick.

The arrests were made at Portland, Inspector Smith rounding up Leighton, while Patrick was taken into custody by Inspector Barbour.

In Patrick's room was found a block of wood, such as is used by engravers, upon which a draught had been made of a Harvard-Yale ticket, which is as elaborate as a banknote.

The block was large enough so that the back of the ticket could have been engraved upon it, but no attempt had been made to do so. Patrick told the officers that Leighton offered him $15 to make the engraving.

Captain Peterson of Portland had been informed by another engraver that a Boston man had tried to get him to do the job, and the investigation which resulted in the arresting of Leighton and Patrick was instituted.

BURGLARS IN WRENTHAM.

WRENTHAM, Nov. 20.—The residence of Mrs. Llewellyn Mahar on Taunton street was entered by two men and a pocketbook, gold watch and jewelry taken.

A Constant Smile.

A face wreathed in smiles never grows old. Wrinkles are the sign of care, and deep lines are evidence of suffering. A cheerful face is a joy to behold, while a person always frowning is rarely pleasant, which is mostly due to disease. The victims of dyspepsia betray their condition by a scowl. Persons enjoying good health always smile, and "the world smiles with them." If you have symptoms, as pains in the sides, back or under the shoulder blades, tired feeling, smothering sensations, etc., you should take Dr. Burkhart's Vegetable Compound, and present to the world a beaming countenance. All impurities and foreign poisonous substances are thrown out of the system, making the blood rich, pure and lean. The entire body becomes reinvigorated and a new lease of life is given, coloring the entire existence with the rosiest hue and perfect health. Thirty days' treatment, 50c. All druggists.

WOMAN AND SON NEARLY DIE IN FIRE

Pair Imperilled in Blaze Which Destroys Famous Malden Roadhouse.

Fire which destroyed the once noted "Black Ash" roadhouse near the Saugus marshes in Malden at an early hour to-day sent Mrs. Mary Porter, thinly clad, to the street and compelled her son Robert to jump from a second-story window. He escaped by Mrs. Porter who awoke finding her room filled with dense smoke and in terror sent which threatened to consume her. She cried out to her son to flee and then groped her way through the smoke to safety.

When the son realized his peril and turned to flee he was hemmed in by flames leaving his only avenue of escape through his bedroom window.

The house burned was one of the oldest landmarks in Malden and during its occupancy since the days of the American revolution has been the scene of much intrigue and even murder.

Thirty-five years ago Thomas Hertz, then owner, murdered his housekeeper and was sentenced to life imprisonment. He was pardoned after eighteen years in State prison. Two years ago an Italian woman occupant was nearly beaten to death by robbers who stole her savings and left her to die. The house is in a lonely neighborhood.

Robert Porter who has lived there with his mother recently bought the house and was making repairs on it. He is employed by a local ice company.

MILK PRICES CUT, FARMERS TO SELL COWS

Westboro Producers Aroused by Action of Deerfoot Farm Concern.

A wholesale threat is made to-day by the milk producers of Westboro, in Worcester county, according to dispatches from that place, that they will sell out their cows and milk outfits and go out of business rather than accept a reduction which, they say, has just been forced on them by the Deerfoot Farm Company, in Southboro.

Dispatches from Sterling, another large milk producing centre in the same county say that Allen Brothers, the biggest milk producers in the town, have decided to sell out their ninety cows rather than try to sell out for the Boston contractors at present rates.

The Westboro agitation started when the Westboro milk shippers received milk checks yesterday morning, giving them 3¢ to 3¢ cents per can for their milk sent to the Deerfoot Farm Company. As few were paid at the rate of 40 cents a can, but the average is about 36 cents.

From a circular recently sent out by the Deerfoot company the milk farmers expected to average 40 cents per can. Many of the producers, on receiving the low-rate checks yesterday, started for the Deerfoot offices to demand an explanation from President Robert M. Burnett of the Deerfoot concern.

The producers feel that, as the Deerfoot company receives 8 cents a can for its milk, it can afford to pay higher than an average of 36 cents to the producers.

FOILED AGAIN! WAILS WOBURN ROBBER BAND

Station Agent O'Brien Removed Roll and Burglars Make Haul of Just Forty Cents.

William O'Brien, who is employed by the Boston & Maine as station master at the Woburn depot, is not in the same class with Steve Brodie, that is, as far as taking chances is concerned. He is just as lucky, however, as a band of robbers who had planned on making a nice little haul can testify.

Business has been rather brisk lately and O'Brien's cash drawer was well filled when he finished his labors last evening. It did look inviting and Mr. O'Brien thought to himself "a roll is my hand is worth two on the counting house," so he tucked it away in his jeans and went home.

He has it safely, safe in the little cash drawer, but somewhere not many miles from the depot are some tired and disappointed robbers whose night's work netted them just forty cents.

Mr. O'Brien had foiled them.

Stock Reducing Sales at Siegel's

Tailored suits, long coats, evening coats, beautiful afternoon and evening gowns, voile skirts, misses' suits and coats and children's school dresses

Bargains for Thursday, Friday and Saturday more remarkable than any yet offered

Hundreds of shoppers who came down town Monday in response to the announcements of other stores wound up by making their purchase at Siegel's, the only store in Boston offering strictly new, fresh merchandize at such prices as the following: Second Floor.

During the past few days we have had opportunities to buy out stocks but turned them down because they were old and shopworn, mostly purchased for last Spring and Summer, and who wants to buy Spring and Summer wearing apparel at this time of year?

We turned them down because the purchasing power of the four great Siegel stores enables us to buy out manufacturers' new fresh surplus stocks at lower prices than we would be compelled to pay for bankrupt stocks, etc.

Three manufacturers' lines of sample and surplus stocks of suits and coats are include2 in this marvelous three days' sale, beginning Thursday morning at 8.30 sharp. Absolutely everything in this sale was made up especially for this Fall and Winter business. Every garment is to the height of fashion. Every material used is of a superb quality, insuring satisfactory service.

What Do You Think of This?

Another story about a sale, locked up the cause of the real bargains in private vaults, so the public could not get them, and sent out cards to "particular friends" inviting them to come and select what they wanted. The general public had no chance to get the bargains, as they were all picked out. All our merchandize in all our special sales and in all the biggest sales we have, is displayed where everyone can view and inspect it.

Dorothy Dix Says That the Man Who Is Excessively Domestic Has Not Yet Learned

THE WAY TO KEEP A WIFE'S LOVE

BY DOROTHY DIX

IT will be interesting and encouraging news to women to learn that men have begun to discuss the question: "How shall I keep my wife's affections?" up to the present moment the problem of retaining the love of one's matrimonial partner appears to have been a purely feminine one.

Millions of married women have been engaged in the heartrending struggle to keep young and slim, though fat and forty, in order to still try to look alluring in their husbands' eyes.

Other millions of fluffy brain ladies have religiously pursued the fallacious idea, seen in the newspaper, in favor of the political editorials and the stock market, the fallacious hope that they could keep their husbands fascinated by handing out the line of conversation that men are supposed to place on.

Still other millions of women have made domestic drudges of themselves in the fond belief that the only real strangle hold on a man's affection was domesticity.

So far, however, men do not appear to have agitated themselves about losing their wives' affections, and if any gentle man ever perceived that the temperature of his wife's love had gone down from fever heat to below normal, he gave no indication of being unduly worried over the fact.

There has been no pressing demand for information about how a husband may retain a hale of romance about himself by the fierce light that beats about matrimony, and when we have seen a stout, middle-aged gentleman taking to corsets and dyeing his mustache, we have all been suspicious that it wasn't his wife for whom he was beautifying himself and trying to look young.

Women Independent

But all of this belongs to the good, old, easy-going past, when a woman was so glad to get married, and so thankful to have any sort of a husband that she didn't look her gift horse too closely in the mouth.

Now, that women have careers, and any able-bodied girl can support herself comfortably than a husband is liable to do it, wives are getting harder to please and more distasteful, and it has dawned on the man that it's just as much of a problem for a husband to keep a wife as it is for a wife to retain her husband's affection.

At least, this is the point of view of a Chicago man, who believes that he has solved the momentous question of keeping a wife happy and satisfied, and who has been handing out a few tips to his brethren on the subject.

This man says that he noticed that his wife was growing moody and disgruntled, and nervous and peevish, and that the results were little family spats.

In seeking for the cause, he found it, as to speak, in the dishpan. Wifey's days were the monotonous, comfortless, and, he said, of a ceaseless round of cooking and cleaning and sweeping and sweeping and cooking and cleaning. The man offered to hire a servant, but his wife objected because she wanted to save.

Proved His Love

Then what did this heroic and devoted man do but throw himself into the breach. He got busy with the cook book and in less than no time he was a chef and a husband of whom any woman might be proud.

As soon as his day's work was done he lashered with grief from the office to his flat, and then, rolling up his sleeves, he peeped and pinched into his wife that would have melted the heart of a mahogany image of a vegetarian.

More than that he washed the dishes, and all that this fierce lioness of a wife had to do was to sit in the parlor with folded hands and offer up thanks to heaven for having such a husband of matrimonial treasure.

Certainly no woman could doubt the affection of a man who is willing to toil all day to support her and then come home and do the housework, but whether the Chicago man's scheme for retaining a wife's waning affection would work generally is certainly open to question.

Most women would as soon see a Kaiser's cyclone enter their kitchens as their husbands, for experience has shown them that when a man undertakes to make coffee or broil a steak he thinks he is doing he is camping it takes every dish and pan and pot in the place for him to do it in, and three weeks' scrubbing with washing powder to get up the grease that he strews around him.

Snooping Husbands

Nor is there anything else so aggravating as a snooping husband, who is always peering into the ice box to see if anything is being wasted, and gauging the potato parings to see if they are not thick.

And for these and other reasons, the overly domestic husband is not held in high regard by womankind.

Indeed, as an axiom, it may be set down that the less frequently a man goes to her husband's office, and the man into the kitchen, the better a couple are liable to get along.

And so it seems probable that the average man who wishes to retain his wife's affection will have to do it through some other means than the frying pan.

The other ways are so numerous and so obvious that it is needless necessary to mention them.

The continuance of the ante-nuptial jolly, for instance; an occasional treat, such as going to the theatre or a little supper; making a woman feel that she is a real partner in the business of life; liberality in her in the matter of money; all, or any one of these, are guaranteed to make matrimony a merry, sweet song, and keep a wife's love to the boiling point to the end.

"He got busy with the cook book and in less than no time was a chef and a husband of whom any woman might be proud."

"THE TURN OF THE BALANCE"

A Thrilling Story of American Life by Brand Whitlock

CHAPTER IX.—(Continued)

Copyright, 1907, by American Journal-Examiner.

SHE received him in her old manner, without any of the stiffness he had feared the months might have made.

"Ah, Gordon," she said. I'm so glad you've come."

She led the way swiftly into the library. A little wood fire, against the chill of the Autumn evening, was blazing in the wide fireplace; under the lamp on the broad table lay a book she must have put down a moment before.

"What have you been reading? Oh, Walden!" And he turned to her with the smile of their old comradeship to such things.

"I've been reading it again, yes," she said, "and I've wished to talk it over again with you. So you see I'm glad you came."

"I came with a message from"——

"Oh?" The bright look faded from her eyes. "Well, I'm glad, then, that some one sent you to me."

He saw his mistake and grieved for it.

"I wanted to come," he stammered. "I've been intending to come, Elizabeth, anyway."

He felt he was only making the matter worse, and he hated himself for his awkwardness.

"Well," she was saying, "sit down, and tell me whom this fortunate message is from."

She leaned back in her chair, rather grandly, he felt. He regretted the touch of formality that was almost an irony in her speech. But he thought it best to let it pass—they could get back to the old footing more quickly if they did it that way.

"You'll never guess," he said.

"I'll not try. Tell me."

"Gusta."

"Gusta?" Elizabeth leaned forward eagerly, and Marriott thought that he had never before seen her so good to look upon; she was so virile, so alive. He noted her gray eyes, bright with interest and surprise, her brown hair, too soft to be confined to any conventional way, and worn as ever with a characteristic independence that recognized without succumbing to fashion. He fixed his eyes on her bright white, strong, full of character. And he bemoaned the loss of these months, which, he wondered, had been so absurd?

"Gusta?" she repeated. "Where did you see Gusta?"

"For Nothing"

"In prison."

"What! No! Oh, Gordon!" she started with the shock, and Marriott found this attitude even more fascinating than the last; her various expressions, changing swiftly, responded with instant sensitive ness to every new influence or suggestion, were all delightful.

"What for? Tell me! Why don't you tell me, Gordon? Why do you sit there?"

Her eyes flashed a reproach at him—and he smiled. He was wholly at ease now.

"For nothing. She's done nothing. She went to see Archie, and the orgiast, pig and brutal as usual, detained her. That's all; they played the charge of assault against her to satisfy the law. The law!"

He sneered out the word.

Elizabeth had fallen back in her chair with an expression of pity.

"Oh, Gordon!" she said with a shudder. "Isn't it horrible, horrible?"

"What, poor Kooiman, family! What can the fates be about? You know—you know it all seems to come on me, such things happen to the world, of course; every day the newspapers, the dreadful newspapers are filled with them. But they never seem real at all, because they never happened to people I know. But this comes on most just think. I've seen that Archie Koerner and he has spoken to me, and we think of him now a murderer! Will—they hang him?"

She leaned forward earnestly.

"No," he said slowly. "They may electrocute him, though—to use their barbarous word."

In Prison

"And now Gusta's in prison!" Elizabeth went on, forgetting Archie. "But her message! You haven't given me her message!"

"Gusta wants you—to come to her."

Elizabeth stared at him blankly.

"To come to her?"

"Yes."

"In prison?"

"Yes."

Her brows contracted, her eyes winked rapidly.

"I don't know." He sat at his ease in the great chair, enjoying the dreaming, the whole significance of her predicament. He had already appreciated its difficulties, its impossibilities, and he was prepared now to wring from every one of them its last sensation. Elizabeth, with her elbow on the arm of her chair, her laces falling away from her white forearm, bit her lip delicately, she seemed to be looking at the toe of her suede shoe.

"Poor little thing!" She spoke abstractedly, as if she were oblivious to Marriott's presence. He was satisfied; it was good for them to sit merely, and look at her. "I must go to her." And then suddenly she looked up and said to Marriott: "Gordon, you'll come with me?"

He did not answer at once, and she did not wait for a reply, but went on, speaking rapidly, her eyes in a dark glow as her interest was intensified.

"Yes! It is a peculiar situation? I don't know how to deal with it. I never was so puzzled before. You must see the difficulties, Gordon. People, well, people don't go to such places, don't you know? I really don't see how it is possible; it makes me shudder to think of it, ugh!" She shrugged her shoulders. "What shall you say to your friends?" she said this as if the problem were his, not hers, and showed a relief in the transfer of the responsibility. "I don't know yet," he said. "Whatever you tell me."

Impossible!

"But you must tell her something; you must make her understand. It won't do for you to hurt the poor girl's feelings."

"Well, I'll just say that I delivered her message and that you wouldn't come."

"Oh, Gordon! How could you be so cruel? You certainly would not be so heartless as to say I wouldn't!"

"Well, then, that you couldn't."

"But she would want a reason, and she'd be entitled to one. What one could you give her? You must think, Gordon, we must both think, and decide on something that will keep us out. What are you laughing at?"

"Why, Elizabeth," he said, "it isn't my predicament. It's your predicament."

He leaned back in his chair comfortably, in an attitude of irresponsibility.

"How can you sit there, Elizabeth said, "and leave it all to me?"

And then she laughed—and her mood was again.

"Of course," she said. "Well—I'm sure I can't solve it. Poor little Gusta! She has so pretty and so good, and so—comfortable to have around—don't you know? Now, we've never had a maid like her, Gordon, we've been so well served. She was ideal. And now to think of her—in prison, eh? It's awful!"

Marriott sat with his head resting on his hand, looked at her through the line of his fingers. The fire was still; the fire burned slowly in the back chimney; now and then the clock gently ticked near by.

"What is prison like, Gordon? Is it really such a awful place?"

Marriott thought of the miserable room in the tenement's quarters with a sigh of wainscoting, the narrow iron bed, the wooden chair and table, the grim contrast it with this luxurious library of the Wards.

"Well," he said, turning rather hastily toward the fire, "it's nothing like this."

"But," Elizabeth looked up suddenly with the eagerness of a new idea—"can't you get her out on bail—isn't that what it's called?"

"Can't get some kind of document, some writ—yes, that's it." She spoke with pleasure because she had found a word that he knew, as well. Surely you are a lawyer clever enough to get her out. I always thought that you could get out of prison if he had a good lawyer. That's what they say."

"You get in prison once and see," said Marriott.

"Like a New World."

"Mercy, I expect to be in prison next," Elizabeth exclaimed. "Prisons." We seem to have had nothing but prisons for a year or more. Don't you remember, Gordon, the first it was the poor Harry Graves, then Archie, and now it's Gusta. And you talk about getting her out on bail—but that won't help. You might try your Organized Charities." He smiled. "Or get pardons!"

"I don't ever mention that to me," she continued, with a flash of scorn over the word. "That's a page from my past that I've turned over."

"Ashamed! Of the Organized Charities?"

"Oh, Gordon, I mean"; tell you what a farce it is—you know it is organized only to help the poor, but to help the rich to forget the poor, to keep the poor at a distance, where they can't reproach you and shock your complacency. The Organized Charities is an institution for the benefit of the well-to-do, for the rich to relieve their pleasure in her epigram, and they both laughed. But the mockery could not last long; in another instant Elizabeth's hands fell to her lap, and she looked at Marriott soberly. "I don't see how I can possibly convict—"

"I just can't go, Gordon"

Visitors

Before Marriott could reply there was a noise of interruption; he heard doors swing open and shut, and the muffled and proper step of a maid, the well-known sounds that told that somewhere in the house a bell had rung. In another moment he heard voices in the hall: a bush of familiarity, more voices—and then Fedes and Moldenweil and Ward entered the room.

The elegant men, stooping an instant to warm his palms before the fire, had taken a seat close to Elizabeth, and he now began remarks about nothing.

"Well! well! well!" he cried. "What grave questions have you two been deciding this time?"

TO BE CONTINUED.

Two Games to Pass the Winter Evenings

HERE are two interesting, entertaining and original games suggested to help pass the long, dreary Winter evenings pleasantly at home that were used by clever friends of mine in their home circle in an evening when it was my good fortune to be their guest.

Blind Fisherman

In the way of a blindfold game was Blind Fisherman. Some one cut out of a sheet the figure of an angler engaged in Izaak Walton's favorite occupation.

Hinged most amusingly fish with staring shoe-button eyes had been fashioned from crêpe paper, and these fish were the property of the company to attach to the fisherman's line.

Each player was bandaged in turn and sent to get a fish. At the end of every twenty minutes the funny fish hung upon window curtains, portieres, pianos everywhere, almost everywhere, in fact, but on the fisherman's line, where the shoy trike was supposed to be.

Trade or Profession

A good puzzle game was Trade or Profession, here called Trade, as the full name would be too cumbrous a term for the mystery involved.

One of two players assumed the part of mind reader. After arranging matters with his confederate, he left the room. They before the right noun was given.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

FORGIVE AND FORGET

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady very much in love with a young man who I know think a lot of me. One evening a little trouble we have parted—that is, we speak, but do not go out with one another, but wherever I go he is after me and keeps on coaxing to let him come back to me. I will not, but let me know whether to go back with him or not as I miss very much, no doubt.

IF you still care for each other you are very foolish to keep up the quarrel. But if you do make it up let your future be bye-gones and put the quarrel entirely out of your mind.

DON'T RUN AFTER HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met a young man lately and love him very dearly. We meet every day, but never speak about anything but business matters. He is very much reserved, but not conceited, and I have never met any one I care for as much. Will you please tell me how I can make him care for me? I am little, as I feel I cannot live without him.

HE probably looks on you merely as a business acquaintance. If you behave in a modest, ladylike way he may in time grow interested in you, but he never will if you run after him in any way.

UNKNOWN MAN FOUND DEAD IN STATEROOM

An unidentified man, who called himself Mr. Gay of Boston," but whose clothing bore the name of H. Shackford, was found dead early this morning in a stateroom on board the Governor Dingley, which plies between Union wharf and Portland. Captain Linscott of the Governor Dingley, who reported the case to the police, said the man went to Portland on the boat Monday night and started back on the trip last night. He told the captain he was seventy years old. Medical Examiner McGrath viewed the body this morning, but has not determined the cause of death. There were no evidences of foul play. The man's clothing bore the mark of Mitchell, tailor.

Appetite—None

The Woeful Reflections of a Withered Dyspeptic.

No substitute for good nature has yet been found. Smiles take root in the stomach. Without good digestion there never can be very much sunshine, for the very simple reason that the stomach and the brain are twins, and what affects one invariably affects the other. The adage that the best road to a person's heart is via the stomach, still holds good.

Gorged grub and pappy pie always breed gloom and sleepless nights.

They also breed dyspepsia—quick dyspepsia, and dyspepsia shows itself

Is This You?

In a variety of ways—belching, burning sensation, an empty feeling in the stomach, bloating after eating, brash, aversion to food, fermentation, or downright indigestion.

There are few diseases which create such misery—long drawn out misery—as dyspepsia. It pursues you before meals, after meals, and between meals; you take it to bed with you; it is with you at the theatre and at your desk.

What is the only way to get rid of it?

You don't have to stop eating, you don't have to diet. Just take something that will do the work of the stomach and let the stomach take a rest.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the most wonderful little tablets on earth for this very thing.

In plain arithmetic, 1 of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets—1 good strong stomach for 1 time for 1 good hearty meal. One ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest perfectly 3,000 grains of food in just the same way that a strong, robust, healthy stomach would do it.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets enrich and increase the gastric juice in your stomach, and that is mostly what you need—more and better gastric juice. And it gives the stomach a rest, a good long rest. In the meantime it cures the dyspepsia, and all other stomach troubles.

Just a few of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will prove to you what these little cherubs of health and happiness can do.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale at all druggists at 50c a box.

NEWBURYPORT HISGEN LEADER OUT FOR BOARD

NEWBURYPORT, Nov. 20.—William Nice, who so well managed the campaign for the Independence League at the State election, and who looked after the interests of Thomas L. Higgen in this city, will be a candidate for Alderman from Ward 4 in the coming city election.

He intended to run as a candidate of the Independence League, but on filing his nomination paper, containing 103 names, at the office of the city clerk he ascertained that, inasmuch as it was not a nomination by party caucus, he would be obliged to use some other designation under the law.

Mr. Nice will probably run as an Independence League Citizen. As an indication of his interest in public affairs, it is stated that he has not missed a meeting of the city government this year, although not a member of it.

He has been a close student of city affairs, and if elected next December will be a strong exponent for good government principles and management.

WATERLESS BOILED EGGS THE LATEST

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Boiling eggs without the use of water is the latest novelty exploited at one of Chicago's leading hotels, and as it is accomplished directly before the eyes of the guest, the new way of cooking generally attracts attention.

The waiter places a box-like apparatus before the guest and turns on a little electricity from the lamp-bracket on the wall and places the desired number of eggs in the heater. In almost a minute and a half the eggs are cooked.

SAY BANKER HELPED SELF TO MILLIONS

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Approximately $2,000,000 which the federal prosecutors charge had been transferred by John R. Walsh from the vaults of the Chicago National Bank to his several enterprises had been traced by means of entries in the books of the institution when National Bank Examiner Moxey stepped down from the witness stand at the adjournment of the Walsh trial.

Mr. Moxey identified eighteen entries which it is claimed by the prosecution are proof positive of misapplication of funds as charged. The aggregate of the amounts testified to was $1,000,000. A similar amount was traced in like manner yesterday.

Twenty-six counts of the indictment remained to be considered when Judge Anderson adjourned court.

GUY FAWKES PLOT FOUND IN SERVIA

VIENNA, Nov. 20.—A conspiracy to blow up the Montenegrin Skupshtina, or national assembly, to murder Prince Nicholas, all members of his family and his ministers, to seize the Montenegrin government and to form a union of all Servian speaking countries has been discovered, according to dispatches from Cettinje, the capital of Montenegro.

More than 150 arrests have been made. Implicated in the plot, according to evidence in the authorities' possession, are former Premier Radovic and many of the most influential men in Montenegro, several of them relatives of Prince Nicholas.

Radovic was arrested at the Austrian frontier while in flight.

The plot was exposed through the arrest of a tenor, a Montenegrin of noble family, named Rajkovic, who, with a companion, was crossing the border, returning from Servia.

Documents relating to the conspiracy were found by customs inspectors. Among them were letters warning friends not to attend the Skupshtina, in their baggage were bombs, arms and ammunition.

Rajkovic has made a confession, revealing details of the plot and including a complete list of those concerned, together with the parts they were to play.

The plot was hatched by disaffected Montenegrins at Belgrade. A strong following had already been secured throughout Montenegro, Bosnia, Herzegovina, Servia and Macedonia and the distribution of arms had begun.

Anty Drudge Advises a Bride.

Mrs. Bride—"I'm going to have all the latest conveniences in my kitchen: rotary washing machine, copper washboiler—"

Anty Drudge—"Stop, my dear! Leave out that 'washboiler.' The first thing to get is a box of Fels-Naptha soap. It's the greatest of modern conveniences. It'll save you more labor and trouble than anything else. Makes boiling clothes unnecessary, for it cleans 'em in cool or lukewarm water."

By using Fels-Naptha any woman can save hours on her day's washing.

She can be through with it in half the time required by the old-fashioned, washboiler, hard-rubbing, back-breaking way.

And instead of being worn out, she is fresh and ready for other work, or play.

Any woman can end washday drudgery for all time by using Fels-Naptha in the Fels-Naptha way, in cool or lukewarm water.

Never use hot water or boil the clothes.

You can tell the genuine Fels-Naptha by the red and green wrapper. Follow directions on the back.

The committee in charge comprises John Harrington, James Russell, John Russell, Fred Fox, May Mayhall, Antoinette McCarthy, May Hunt, May Brett, Agnes Rowin, Mary Guilford.

CARUSO'S COUSIN HELD FOR LARCENY

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Salvatore Caruso, thirty-five years old, 508 West Huron street, who is a cousin of the Italian tenor of "monkey" fame, is under arrest here for larceny. He is charged with stealing bronzes from cars of the Chicago & Northern railroad on which he was employed as a section hand.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

HARVARD'S SQUAD TO BE GIVEN THEIR LAST HARD WORK TODAY IN STADIUM

This will be the last practice day for the Harvard football squad before the Yale game Saturday. The work will be secret and it is understood will be most strenuous.

To-morrow afternoon the varsity football team will be taken to the Norfolk Hunt Club in Medfield, where the players will spend the night. They will all return on Friday morning and attend lectures, as the absence regulations have been relaxed to allow day pupils to go home.

After lectures the team will return to the Norfolk Club, where they will practice in the afternoon. The evening will be spent quietly by the men in playing cards or in singing songs, and on Saturday morning they will return to Cambridge in time for the lunch in the training table. They will go directly to the field from the training table.

Crimson May Surprise All.

The 37,000 spectators who gather at the Stadium to see the clash will undoubtedly be treated to a small surprise when they see the game that the Crimson eleven puts up. Perhaps they will not know any football, but they will make up for the lack of knowledge of the game by pure skill. The men are all on edge and yesterday afternoon went through a spirited secret practice in which new formations were practiced and the regular defensive work of blocking, breaking through and charging for the linemen, running down under punts for the ends, and catching and running with the ball for the backs.

An enthusiastic mass meeting was held in Union Hall, Coach Craigie Carroll Parker made speeches which were loudly cheered.

Students Parade.

After the mass meeting the undergraduates swarmed out into the street and, headed by a band, marched up and down the streets near the yard and then to the Union. Loud cheers arose from the body of young men as they passed by and a halt was forced a large red "H" flaming over one of the doors. Around and around the yard the long, snakelike string of nearly 2,000 undergraduates chased with cheers for Massachusetts avenue, holding up a long line of electric cars on their way to M. Auburn street, where cheer after cheer was given for the various members of the team who lived in the dormitories on that street.

It was announced yesterday by the Harvard Athletic Association that 45,000 application were now on hand for the Yale game. Thirty-seven thousand tickets, and those that were not were thrown out on account of there not being room for the people in the Stadium.

COY, YALE'S GREAT KICKER.

Coy is one of the best players the Elis have had in years. He will likely be elected captain next season.

LOTTA'S SONOMA GIRL WILL BE SENT TO SAVANNAH FOR WINTER FRANK SMITH SAYS

Frank Smith, manager of the Crabtree string of Grand Circuit horses, is spending a few days in Boston, or rather waiting on his cars before attending the big New York sale, which opens next Monday. At the conclusion of the sale Smith returns to the Hub for the Winter.

Speaking of Sonoma Girl, he declared that after the Columbus meeting, and particularly at Lexington, she was in such excellent condition that no trotter in the world would have had a show against her in a race. It is likely that she was up to 2-three trips fairly close to 2.05.

It was unfortunate that she was on her bad behavior in the Blue Hill, Massachusetts and Charter Oak stakes, as had she picked them up the amount of her winnings, with what she earned later, would nearly have won out the $26,000 that she cost Lotta Crabtree.

Smith expects that the horses will soon be shipped from the Neponset farm to Savannah, where they have been wintered the past couple of seasons. Jack Crabtree likes there very much, the weather is so perfect. He believes that another Spring as stable will then be shipped from Savannah to the Poughkeepsie track for the winbling coaches. He says that no place is the country equals Poughkeepsie for getting horses ready for the Grand Circuit.

"There is little use in owning race horses now with any idea of their paying for themselves in the betting," expressed Manager Smith, in noting the race track changes that have taken place in the past few years. "In the past season, for example, what betting there was in the Grand Circuit came from amongst us alone. It was pretty good betting at Detroit, but nothing doing at Cleveland, and the boys got a chance at Buffalo and Poughkeepsie, and all they didn't gamble over Hogsettes in lopping pools. Of course, there was no betting at Readville, Providence or Hartford, and there might as well not have been at Syracuse, as it was outside the grounds, and few will bother with it. What money a trotter or pacer can get now, to be profitable, must come from the big stake races."

YALE EXPECTS TO WIN, BUT BY A SMALL SCORE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 20.—Yale coaches took for a close game with Harvard.

A canvass of the men brought forth the statement that no one could be found who thought that Yale was likely to win by more than two points over Harvard. The feeling is universal here that the match will be stubbornly and closely fought, but that Yale should logically win by a small score.

Trainer Mack says the men are rounding into form again and will be all right for a good, brisk scrimmage to-day. The decision of the coaches to have no scrimmage on Tuesday was no surprise to those who have followed the conduct of the team this year. The players had to put forth their best power on Saturday and they needed the rest.

W. W. Heffelfinger, the famous old guard, who came on Saturday's game, has decided to remain with the team until after the Harvard game. He assisted in the coaching. So did Ralph Kinney, another guard.

The distribution of Harvard tickets began yesterday. Realty speculators are here trying to buy tickets at any price.

The football association has detectives out to replevin any tickets that are found in the hands of speculators. Harvard people are asking everyone they know in New Haven for tickets, as many of the tickets allotted to Yale men will undoubtedly go to Harvard people who have failed to get them in Cambridge.

BAY STATE A. A. WILL TRY TO ENFORCE MOTOR LAWS

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The officers of the Bay State Automobile Association evidently propose to be up and doing during the Winter months. With that idea in mind the directors, at their adjourned meeting, granted to the entertainment committee all the necessary powers to arrange for the holding of a meeting of motorists on November 30, at which it is hoped certain state and city officials will be secured to talk in an interesting manner on how the motorists may assist in the enforcement and recognition of the laws governing the use of motor vehicles. The organization appreciates the fact that the owners and users of motor vehicles are the only ones to bring about the present laws, and in meeting will be devoted entirely to that question. It is hoped that certain leading public officials and those heading State officials will be induced to present their views on the matter.

Chairman George W. McNear will have charge of this meeting. The same committee was also authorized to arrange for the holding of a club banquet at the Hotel Somerset on the evening of December 6, when it is expected the leading A. A. officials of the country will give their opinions of the many important matters relating to motor legislation as well as tell of the benefits and pleasures derived from the safe and sane use of the motor vehicle.

The special display of racing cars that has attracted so much attention at the automobile salon in Paris will be brought to this country for the foreign show to be held in Madison Square Garden, provided satisfactory arrangements can be made with the customs officials. If the negotiations succeed the combination just completed Madison Square Garden will have 58 pounds, 1st, Thompson, 161; second, 145; Belfour, 161; Davidson, 165; December 28 and runs for a week. HAGHEY IN SHAPE FOR HIS BOUT WITH PAPKE

The condition that Charlie Haghey is in at the present time speaks volumes for the efforts of Jimmy Barry of Chicago in his behalf. The Chicago man has been in Chelsea since Monday a week working out with the Lowell boxer and he has got the former slugger from Lowell in as good shape as he has ever been in. Barry says that if Haghey can keep up the stride at which he is traveling now he has nothing to fear from Papke, and no one is better qualified than Barry to speak of Papke, for he broke into the game at the same time as the Spring Valley man did and both picked up the art of boxing in the same town. Barry is jubilant over the form of Haghey and he has become so impressed with the boxing of Charlie that he has already made him a proposition to go on the road with him after he leaves here.

Never was Haghey more confident of victory than he is at present, and he says that he will surely beat the Western fighter and then take his place against Bartley Connolly, so that the members of the club will not be disappointed for two bouts.

Connolly will arrive in this city to-night, accompanied by his legion of Portland friends that always surround him when battles are in view. The Portland boy has planned to give the visitor a good jabbing with the left and has declared to mix matters with him at any time. In this way he figures that it will be easy to outpoint the rushing Westerner. He saw him in action against Tommy Sullivan last Labor Day, and ever since he has been sanguine that he could beat him.

Notes of the Harness Horses

Thomas W. Lawson can rest easy for another year. He has been president of the Mossfield Agricultural Society.

Peter Jay has planned to take in the New Orleans running meeting at the close of the Fall season. He has promised to be a big bidding or two after he has been down there long enough to have gotten rested.

Trainer Jack Bowers is happy in having the Reservoir avenue speedway placed in first-class condition. Bowers has been raising a subscription from among the horsemen.

Charlie Leach, the veteran trainer for Bob Durland at Saugus track a few years ago, has been engaged at the home of Randolph Carhart, but is now recovering.

The Readville horses are timed by an electric clock located where all the spectators can easily see, and to have the time accurate a string is stretched across the track and starts the clock going when the horses pass it. The string is held up by breaking another string when finishing. Several speedways in this section have adopted the plan.

Ormonde, which as a four-year-old trotted a trial in 2.08, is to be fitted for a campaign through the Grand Circuit another season.

other two races. At the Hitchpole meeting he was timed three heats in a workout in 2:12¼, 2:12¼, 2:12¼, and Ormonde is at least 2:09.

Peter Jay planned to take in the Grand Circuit meeting a week ago, but was prevented by the illness of Mrs. Jay. Mrs. Jay is reported to be much improved in health.

Mabel Hensgen, owner of the three-year-old stallion Apple, 2:08¾, and trial of 2:09, has been offered $5,000 for the youngster, but refused. Apple is a member of Daniel Boone, Red Lady, Red Bird, Zombro, Mack, Wilkes and Bayard, 2:17¼.

Dan Lindy, trainer for Count Patocki of Vienna, Austria, is ordering for a price on the stallion Lindy, the brother of Peter, 2:07½, owned by M. B. Smith of Hartford, and who has his stock farm in Belfast, Me.

Colonel R. H. Stevenson intends using the trotting stallion Bingen, 2:08¾, on the road next season after finishing Readville.

Billy Hurd (2.14¾), the pacer which has been so successful the past few years in southern New England, has been sold by Ira Barr to owner in Charleston, S. C.

One of the best money-winning pacers out the past season was Young Onward (2.11¾), the Providence gelding. In twelve starts he was first on times, and got a second and a fourth in the

STAR SKATERS WILL COMPETE

A big card of skating races is on tap at the Park square Rink to-night which will consist of amateur and professional events. A lot of new stars will come out for the amateur races while all the big speeders in the "pro" ranks will do some sensational work on the track.

There is some new talent in the group of amateur skaters who have been brushing up their speed and it is expected that several new ones will come to the front as dark horses.

Young Hamilton, who has been making the best of the handicaps allowed him and cleaning up the strong fields, will be set back while his champion older brother is scheduled to have a hard tussle with Williams, Geodron, Holden and others of equal standing.

FIRST GAME TONIGHT.

Tonight, in Lyceum Hall, East Boston, the East Boston basketball team, claimant to the world's championship, will open its season with the fast Southbridge five.

WILLIE FITZ WHIPS STERN

READING, Pa., Nov. 20.—Willie Fitzgerald got Kid Stern of Philadelphia out of business here in the sixth round of what was to be a ten-round bout. Stern put up a good fight for the first five rounds, but in the sixth Fitzgerald landed on his jaw and stomach and he went down for the count of nine. After that it was all over, for Fitzgerald sent him to the floor six times in succession and he was unable to continue.

ASHLEY DRAWS WITH NELSON

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—In the principal event at Brown's Gymnasium Guy Ashley of Pall River and Jack Nelson fought a six-round draw. Nelson was clever, but the rugged New Englander came back strongly after each round and the local fighter used his weight to advantage in the clinches.

In the preliminaries Young Mack and Young Sullivan fought a four-round draw. Tommy Nelson was outpointed by Al Reichmaker in four rounds, Jack Johnson and Phil McGovern boxed a four-round draw.

DESHLER BOXES O'BRIEN AT COOPER A. C.

At the Cooper Club to-night Dave Deshler and Rouse O'Brien will endeavor to settle the question as to which is the better boxer. In their previous bout no decision was given, but one will be made to-night in both two-round contests. They are rivals for honors in the lightweight division and, being evenly matched, will put up a good go.

Deshler's showing against Billy Grover made his friends to believe that he will win to-night, while O'Brien's friends claim they are equally as confident that Briggs will win.

Both boxers are in good shape and the bout is expected to be a fast one.

The meeting will start at 8:15 with Jack Regan of Philadelphia and Jack Farrell of Gerald of South Boston for a six-round bout. Eagan comes to the front recommended as a boxer that will make any boy in his class step.

In the semi-final contest of eight rounds Johnny Cavill of Boston and Denny Ryan fill clash.

LEAN AND JEVNE WIN.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 20.—In the twentieth game of the tournament for the three-cushion billiard championship, played here, Horace B. Lean of St. Louis defeated Thomas A. Heuston, also of St. Louis, 50 to 35. In the shortest game thus far in the tournament Lloyd Jevne of Chicago defeated Frank P. Day of St. Louis, 50 to 21.

EMPIRE CITY TRACK WINS.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 20.—The Court of Appeals affirmed the order of the appellate division, second department, granting a peremptory writ of mandamus to the Empire City Racing Club, directing the State Racing Commission to issue license to the club to conduct race meetings for the year 1907, at its tracks near Yonkers.

YOUNG PROKOS WINS.

Young Prokos defeated Eugene Tremblay, world's lightweight champion, at the Columbia Theatre, by winning one fall at wrestling under catch-as-catch-can rules, after a most strenuous contest lasting over one and thirty-three minutes.

BRIGGS MEETS KID FREEMAN TOMORROW

The bout between Jimmy Briggs, the New England lightweight champion, and Kid Freeman of Dover, N. H., which was to be decided at Dover, N. H., to-morrow night, will be the biggest boxing event ever held in that section of the Granite State and there will be a tremendous crowd there to see the bouts. Four of them are on the list and some excellent sport will be provided. The little colored fellows, Victor and Cassidy, who are to open the entertainment, met on Cambridge street yesterday afternoon and engaged in a long but interested several minutes.

They settled their differences at Dover, as friends interfered and prevents a fight, which is

How to Teach a Turkey to Dance

A Rule That Can Be Also Applied to Highly Superior Human Beings

Ordinarily the turkey is a foolish, pompous creature, with a sense of dignity out of all proportion to his importance.

His chief object in life is to impress the other barnyard fowls with his dignity; his principal accomplishments are throwing out chest and spreading his tail feathers, while he makes a prodigious gobbling noise in his throat.

All very like many highly superior human beings.

A long time ago farmer boys learned that while the turkey's devotion to gluttony was leading him fatuously to pad himself for Thanksgivings dinners, he could be taught to perform for the entertainment of the neighborhood.

It is not much brain inside the turkey's little red-wattled head, but a warm iron plate was put under his feet he nevertheless would dance very amusingly.

This was done by drawing up one foot to cool it, then putting it down and drawing up the other, and so on. The result was a solemn minuet of the sort that was fashionable when people wore powdered wigs and took pinches of snuff to patch on their faces.

Perhaps they who are now calling while the warm plate was applied to Mr. Turkey's feet, but they will make the whistling taught him to associate the idea of hot claws with music. The men are all on edge, then the whistling began the turkey commenced to dance. afternoon went through the same evolution was complete.

YALE EX

ever observe how much like this dancing turkey a great many human beings are!

BUT

NECESSITY, brought home to the turkey unpleasantly, forces him to abandon his foolish strutting and posturing and to learn something of the ordinary.

necessity brought home equally unpleasantly to the self-satisfied human creature causes him to cease admiring himself and to learn something useful.

NEW HAVEN, look for a close g A famous of discipline.

The statement that turkey's dancing, it is true, does not add to his happiness or who thought that a mission, which is that of gladdening the banquet table by his by more than presence, would be just as well carried out if his feet had never yard. The feeling devoted to any higher purpose than scratching for food.

the match will be fought, but that but to the human turkey the sudden shock which opens his eyes to by a small score possibilities is often of the highest benefit.

If you could take a man of no inventiveness or initiative and deposit him alone on a desert island, he would at first sit down and wring his hands in despair.

Then he would begin to look around. Presently, as soon as he became HUNGRY he would begin to THINK.

After that he would study the island and its possibilities—devise means for getting such food as was to be had. Then he would build a raft or a boat and explore the other islands in the neighborhood. At the end of a year he would be ill-clad and savage in appearance, but he would be using his mind every waking minute, and if you transported him back to civilization he would be worth three of his former self.

Poverty, ambition, love, anything important enough to arouse a man's interest and to make apparent to him the necessity of doing something better with his brains than he has done, can change his whole character.

The people who stay in ruts do not stay there because they have not the ability to get out.

Make the ruts sufficiently UNPLEASANT and they will very shortly cease to be occupied by the majority of the inhabitants of the earth.

If happy, hopeful youth could understand old age, with its sorrow, desolation and despair; if present day prosperity could realize the meaning of adversity, human activity and usefulness would be many times multiplied.

The unsuspected talent discovered late in life is unusual. But every man has POSSIBILITIES which are but little used, and which at last dry up from neglect, like the atrophied muscles of a man strapped for years in an invalid's chair.

Disappointments or misfortunes are no more enjoyable to those to whom they come than the warmed plate which teaches the turkey to dance. But unless they came occasionally to supply a stimulus to action, our whole proud race of reasoning bipeds would be very like the solemn, self-satisfied fowls that will strut and gobble and pose about the barnyards until the farmer comes to lop off their silly heads and send them to market for Thanksgiving.

"Your Button or Your Job"

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I am a driver of a dump cart and am now engaged in helping do some work for the city. Yesterday I drove my cart up to the work we are doing, near the Catholic church in Brighton, and my coat I wore a Coulthurst button. The foreman on the job saw the button, and said, "Take that button off or take this team off the job." I had to take the button off or lose my position. This is one of the ways that the administration is trying to whip city employes into line for Fitzgerald.

A DRIVER.

Nov. 19, 1907.

John A. Coulthurst is not the kind of man who would want anyone to wear his button at the sacrifice of his position. You are not the only employe of the city who has been warned against wearing Coulthurst's button, or in any other way showing a preference for a candidate other than Mayor Fitzgerald.

But here is one thing for you and others in the employ of the city to remember—NO POLITICAL BOSS CAN SPY UPON YOU WHEN YOU PREPARE YOUR BALLOT IN THE BOOTH ON DECEMBER 10.—Ed.

Firemen Waiting for the Mayor's Successor

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Sir—Enclosed you will find an exact copy of the petition issued by Fire Commissioner Wells, through the instructions of our Mayor, John F. Fitzgerald, to repeal the day off in five given them by Acting Mayor Daniel J. Whelton. This petition was made out at headquarters and sent around to every district to have the men sign.

We can thank the kindness and activity of ex-Alderman Kneeland. He saw at once that such signing such was violating a rule in the Black Book as we call it, or the book of rules. Ex-Alderman Kneeland went at once to the late Chief Cheswell and showed him how he was violating a rule. But all the chief could say was: "The Commissioner sent them down and he must do as he said."

Ex-Alderman Kneeland went to the commissioner in regard to it and it was recalled from the fire houses in jig time with very few signatures.

When the reporters heard of it they went to the Mayor, but he knew nothing about it, neither did his understudy in the affair, Benjamin W. Wells.

This, Mr. Editor, is what the "Higger, Better and Busier" Mayor of Boston, John F. Fitzgerald, has done for the men who work night and day protecting the city.

This petition was made to make it appear that the members themselves were willing, but as you know no one would sign it. The firemen are now the greatest paid men in the city. They have to work 24 hours out of 24 and still the Mayor tried to take what a just, broad-minded man thought was little enough to give us.

Two years ago, in the mayoralty campaign, Henry S. Fitzgerald came to every firehouse in the North End, and I believe all over the city and told us that John F. Fitzgerald was a better man to do for us four—if we would only vote to him. We stuck to him and he got what everybody else got—a lot of hot air.

But each man put a vote and there will be a number of Independence Leaguers elected by the time the next meeting of the department next month. I am writing you this hoping it may help to defeat all who mean and defeat a plundering deceiver. Trusting this to print, I remain yours,

INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE FRIEND.

[We would give my full name, but as I had a city job I cannot. C. F. G. is correct. There is a rumor around the department that the Mayor is intending to give the men fifteen minutes extra for meals. Of course this is to try to get their votes. I hope you will publish this so you will be doing the firemen a great favor. They want nothing now. It has taken the Mayor so long that we can wait now for another six weeks until the Mayor's successor takes office. C. F. G.

How Does It Feel to Be a Campaign Contributor?

You Don't Know? Here's Your Chance to Find Out

How would it feel to YOU, impecunious voter, to see your name on a list of CONTRIBUTORS TO A CAMPAIGN FUND?

Suppose you try it, and find out.

Fitzgerald's campaign will be financed, as it was two years ago, by the Elevated Railway, the Lighting Trust, the Telephone Trust and other rich and powerful institutions that can extract profits from the people with a Mayor's aid.

Hibbard's campaign will be paid for by similar institutions—which are "non-partisan" in such matters—and by those other interests which Senator Lodge knows so well how to approach.

Mr. Coulthurst will have no funds obtained from such sources. No interest that has anything to gain by his election as Mayor will be asked to contribute. No public service corporation CAN contribute; money from such sources, even if offered, would be rejected by his campaign committee.

Fortunately, Mr. Coulthurst does not REQUIRE so much of a campaign fund as do the other candidates. All that is needed is enough money to pay for printing, postage, halls, etc. These are the regular and legitimate expenses of a campaign.

It is necessary that halls and headquarters should be hired, in order that the voters may have a chance to SEE AND HEAR THE CANDIDATE and satisfy themselves that he is the kind of a man they want as their Mayor.

The Independence League City Committee has issued an appeal to those who can afford to contribute only a small amount to send it to the treasurer of the committee, A. L. Leeman, at Room 348, Old South Building. All who contribute are assured that the money will be spent carefully and legitimately, and with the sole purpose of doing the most that can be done to elect a Mayor of Boston who will not be dependent upon the public service monopolists for support.

If you can't afford to give money, we suggest that you go to the League headquarters in the Old South Building and enroll as a WORKER. You can spend some time "talking up" Coulthurst with your friends, and perhaps you will be able to take election day off and serve as a watcher at the polls.

Whether you give money or time or influence, you will have the reward of a clear conscience and the satisfaction of knowing that you did something to prove that a man CAN be elected Mayor without the aid of the Boston Elevated Railway.

The Boarder with the Bright Vest Gives the Melancholy Gentleman a Lesson in Optimism

By Kennett Harris

THE boarder with the drooping forelock and the melancholy cast of countenance looked with a lack-lustre eye on the insistinct prospect of back yard and brick wall that was shrouded by the Nottingham lace curtains of the dining room window, and then picked up a table knife, to drop it with a shiver.

"It's a sweet month, November, isn't it?" he remarked

"Cheer up!" said the plump boarder with the optimistic waistcoat, who was beginning his breakfast. "The oatmeal isn't as salt as usual this morning."

"I could never see the beauties of the Fall," said the boarder with the forelock. "It's the most depressing season of the year to me."

"A little too warm for whis"——began the boarder with the waistcoat.

Whole World Askew

"OH, cut it out!" implored the other. "Every one of my sentiments in the magazines, and the Easter neckwear. Then when it gets to Summer, I rejoice in the thought of lounging on the sandy beach, where the breakers break into cream ripples, at the foot of a dotty with a poppy parasol, while the band plays and the spieler's honest bark comes faintly from the plank walk.

"I don't anticipate any other heat prostrations. I think about the cool grots beneath the street level, where in a dim, religious light the whirring fans shake the foamy tops of German crockery, and of the tinkle of ice against dew-dimmed glass."

Now's the Real Time

"THAT'S the real time of year," sighed the melancholy boarder, "the real time of year is right now," corrected the plump boarder. "Put your mind on the sacks of nuts gaping in the grocery store and on the apples and the cheeses and the oysters and the cider. Think that in a hundred thousand barnyards turkeys are strutting, in a million ovens and scudding forth grateful odors, and that in ten million expanding mostrils, as the oven doors are opened for the basting. Consider the hard sauce and the hot cakes, the buckwheat cakes and maple syrup, and be glad."

"Do you think they are ever going to filter in through to this joint?" demanded the boarder with the drooping forelock.

"Here's Matilda with your breakfast," said the boarder with the bright waistcoat. "You go to work and get outside of your coffee and calves' liver and you'll find the blue in your frame of mind running out and making streaks and patches all over the sky."

With this the boarder with the bright waistcoat rejoined the boarder with the drooping forelock, who was looking at the tender little blades of grass pushing up through the sod, and the little buds swelling through their varnished coats and bursting into greenness. If I can't see them I think about them, and enjoy the back beer signs and the Spring hats.

"I don't worry about the mud and the influenza epidemics. I look at the flower pictures and advertisements in the magazines, and the Easter neckwear. Then when it gets to Summer, I rejoice in the thought of lounging on the sandy beach, where the breakers break into cream ripples, at the foot of a dotty with a poppy parasol, while the band plays and the spieler's honest bark comes faintly from the plank walk.
